SCOREBOARD

RY GRAYSON and JIMMY BRESLIN NEA Staff Correspondents

NEW YORK - (NEA) - Frank Carbo walked into Dempsey's Restaurant on Broadway, flicking the ashes from his cigar so they wouldn't get on an expensive silk shantung suit. "Hey!" he boomed to a guy who was at the bar with his wife. He came over, put a $100 bill on the bar and bought a drink.

"Eddie Machen? Yes, he looks like a very good prospect," Frankie mused. "But I ain't messed up with fights anymore. All those guys. hey write things. That's okay. They wouldn't have nothing to write

This was the Carbo an outsider would meet. Frankie is a guy you saw every place. Al Gallagher's or the St. Moritz or Dinty Moore's in New York, the Chez Paree in Chicago, the Mocambo in Hollywood. Any class joint. You would find him a free-spending, booming guy who made it a point not to talk about the boxing

The biggest promoters have depended on Frankie for 20 years and you start with the day the late Jimmy Johnston came up to him and said, "Frankie, I got to have Babe Risko and Jock McAvoy matched. McAvoy is okay. Can you get Risko?'

Get Risco Frankie could. The same as he was able to get fighters for Mike Jacobs and, of late, James D. Norris' International Without benefit of a license of any kind, Carbo has been able to gain a position of influence in boxing that is unquestionably the strangest part of the fantastic story.

Jim Norris, for example, has said, "Frankie is a friend of mine. if I had to give up his friendship for the sake of premoting boxing. I would just as well give up boxing."

THAT NORRIS AND Carbo were close is undebatable. There was the late night at Longchamps, for example, when Jim was arguing with a racket guy of big league status. The guy got mad, picked up a coffee pot and slammed it into Norris' face. The next morning, Carbo was around looking for the fellow who hit Norris. When he found out who it was - in the underworld rankings, Carbo was a ergeant, the other a field marshal - Frankie could only sooth ruffled

This is not to say Norris was the only promoter around with Frankie. During Mike Jacobs' reign with the 20th Century Sporting Club, Carbo was openly the boss. He would be in Jacobs' mezzanine offices at Madison Square Garden blatantly throwing his weight around, for he got what he wanted.

THE FIRST TIME boxing took note of Frankie was in 1935 when Teddy Yarosz lost the middleweight championship to the obscure Babe Risko of Syracuse. Risko was managed by Gabe Genovese, but t soon became known Carbo was in the picture. Genover has been ndicted in the current investigation.

Frankie began to make an impression from then on. Through Risko he controlled the middleweight title and in 1938 the Cleveiand boys met him for the first time when his new 160-pound champ, Freddie Steele, who had defeated Risko, came in and stopped Carmen Barth.

Carbo was around the pubs spending money as if he printed and nobody forgot his name once he told it to them.

Frankie broke into the East with Steele and you soon saw him at Billy La Hiff's Tavern or Jack White's 18 Club or otherwise on FRANKIE'S FIGHTERS moved. First, Steele lost to Al Hostak. Then Hostak lost the title to Solly Krieger, another Carbo tiger. Then Tigers came from behind on beaglers from all over the countary, Mary F. Peter, 342 W. Rey-Hostak came back to knock out Krieger. "Say what you want about him," Eddie Borden, the Jacobs make the best legal fight manager in the business. He knows more about how to move a fighter than anybody."

Frankle Carbo, as a courtroom trial will attempt to prove, has ing the run that put the Orioles rosettes for the top 5 hounds in oeen moving plenty of fighters.

BEEF TONNAGE IN FEEDLOTS

UP 20%

The most important livestock report issued in July is the quarterly report of cattle on feed. This USDA report for the 13 leading states showed that farmers on July 1 this year were feeding 4,-269,000 head of cattle and calves. This number was 16 per cent more than last year, which was the previous record high.

Increased cattle feeding is reported for both the corn belt and the west. Nine corn belt states were feeding 3,258,000 head, 15 per cent more than the year before. The four leading western states were feeding 1,011,000 head, 19 per cent more than last year. Longer feeds this year. The big ncrease is in moderately heavy cattle, about three-fourths of the increase being in cattle weighing over 900 pounds. The heavier average weights this year reflect some holding-back of cattle to convert more feed into beef. The number of cattle that had been on feed less than three months was up only 9 per cent while the number on feed over three months was up 25 per cent, and the number on feed over six months was up 16 per cent.

This has slowed corn growth down so that talk of "soft corn" is already being heard in some areas. #### Where Is Truth?

As you read the utterances of Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Egyptian President Nasser in the current Middle Eastern muddle, you see at work a technique of politics which by its very nature is destructive of good faith in international relations.

Both these men belong in the school which decrees that, in the interest of your political objectives, you may say anything, no matter how false, wild and irresponsible. But at the same time, they do not expect to be held accountable for these indulgences in verbal violence.

In other words, because they look upon words as tools of war on every level, they regard them with a kind of detachment. And they are considerably astonished when politicians of a different breed insist on viewing their utterances as authentic representations of their character and personality.

Khrushchev, for example, will mount the platform to shout that the Russians will bury the capitalist democracies. He is surprised thereafter when at least a few of the free world's diplomats decline his invitation to a jolly Communist cocktail party. Or when they question his sincerity in proposing disarmament and peace plans. Nasser's Cairo radio can, as it has, incite Arabs to murder and riot, inflame the passions of fanatics, blare false reports of fighting in the hope these accounts will touch off the real thing. Yet Nasser expects to be accepted in diplomatic exchange as if he were a sober, wise, responsible and farseeing leader of Arab nationalism.

It'd be about the same if a fellow got your job by malicious scheming against you in the office and then professed to be stunned because you didn't show up for the old bridge games you all used to love so well.

Demagogues there have always been and presumably always will be. And that means we shall always have to contend with the reckless use of words as a device in the struggle for political power.

Decent free men of good will may not be able to stem the flow of violent utterance. But at the very least they can let the demagogues know that they are held accountable by the world for everything they say, that their wild verbal gyrations are not forgiven and forgotten when they decide it is time to smile, shake hands and sit down to talk "in good faith."

They cannot be allowed the luxury of having two voices. They, like everyone else, speak with only one voice. If is is evil, ugly and inflammatory, the world must know it. It cannot be disguised with the fraudulent overtones

WHO UNDERSTANDS YOUR FAMILY BETTER

YOU OR THE STATE?

That's easy: You do. But the State will take over your privilege of planning the distribution of your property if you fail to make a Will.

The State must base its actions on general rules which may not fit your family's needs at all. You know better how to satisfy each one's requirements.

Working with your attorney, we can translate your knowledge and wishes into a workable estate plan whenever you're ready. The sooner, the safer!
